

CRISIS
WITH PRESIDENT'S SON NOT YET PASSED

IMPOSSIBLE TO SAY WHETHER BOY WILL RECOVER.

CONGESTION MAY TAKE PLACE

Should the Disease Fail to Reach its Culmination Today it May Skip To Seventh Day.

Groton, Mass., Feb. 11.—The morning hours of today brought little change in young Roosevelt's condition, which remains about the same. The temperature, pulse and respiration which improved with the short sleep the sick boy had just before dawn remained the same, a hopeful symptom at this stage of the illness. The pleurisy, which developed during the night, has only been a slight attack so far and up to 11 o'clock this morning gave little or no indication of developing. Some apprehension was felt when signs of pleurisy were evidenced, that emphysema or abscess might result, but this appears so far to be only a possibility.

Secretary Cortelyou at 11 o'clock this morning said that since his statement at 8:30 o'clock nothing had developed and that the boy's condition was unchanged. The President, he said, was at the bedside of his son during almost the entire morning.

Groton, Mass., Feb. 12.—In the condition of Theodore Roosevelt Jr., secretary Cortelyou said today that a little pleurisy had developed in the right lung and that the crisis in the left lung has passed favorably but that the crisis in the right lung was yet to be met but was expected today. The development of the disease yesterday was of such rapidity that the final crisis is thought to be soon at hand. Should the disease fail to reach its culmination today, it will probably skip to the seventh day, a peculiarity of pneumonia. Congestion may take place at any time. Therefore it is impossible to say whether the boy will recover or not.

POPE IS INTERESTED.

Rome, Feb. 12.—The Pope has ordered that he be informed daily as to condition of President Roosevelt's son.

A MORNING BULLETIN.

Groton, Feb. 12.—The excitement in the infirmary early this morning had subsided and it is understood that the patient is now resting easily. Early today the patient complained of difficulty in breathing and the pain caused some delirium.

THE PRINCE'S VISIT.

Berlin, Feb. 12.—In view of fact that no alarm reports have been received from the German embassy at Washington, regarding the condition of President Roosevelt's son, nothing is being done in the way of postponing Prince Henry's visit to the United States.

TWO KILLED

And Two Fatally Hurt in a Collision of Freight With Hand Car
Today.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 11.—Andrews Wanson and August Hensler were killed and Charles Johnson and Henry Carlson were probably fatally injured today on the North-Western railway. They were members of a section crew and ran their hand car on into a freight train during a heavy snow.

Alliance Fire.

Daniel McGugin of Howard, Knox county, aged 66, is dead.

FIRST LEVEE

Of King Edward's Reign—Two Americans Had the "Honor" to Kiss His Majesty's Hand.

London, Feb. 12.—The first levee of King Edward's reign took place at St. James palace today. It was a brilliant affair and was attended by nobles government officers and others. No women were present. Allison Armour of Chicago, and Curtis Brown of Boston, wearing knee breeches and silk stockings, and with little swords hanging at their sides were presented to the King by Ambassador Choate. The Americans, after kissing King Edward's hand made their exit, walking backwards.

CAPTORS

Of Miss Stone Politicians Who Had a Special Purpose in View—Miss Stone's Danger.

London, Feb. 11.—There is now no doubt that the captors of Miss Ellen Stone were politicians who captured her for the purpose of showing Macedonian lawlessness, and thus obtaining foreign intervention for repelling Macedonians from Turkey. They now fear that Miss Stone, who speaks the Bulgarian language, has learned so much of their plans that it would be dangerous to release her and are trying to get money for her release and then cut her throat, hence the refusal on the part of those negotiating for the release to hand over the money until she is safe. The brigands refuse to release her on those terms. If they had been ordinary brigands she would have been released months ago.

ERNE EXPLAINS

Jeff Says His Terms are Approved by the Public—Eddie Gardner Wants To Fight.

New York, Feb. 11.—Frank Erne, the prize fighter, who was billed to meet Joe Gans in a match at Philadelphia last night but failed to do so, is in New York. He said:

"I am willing to stand by my action and when lovers of the sport know the facts they will be with me. I went to Philadelphia and looked the field over. I soon turned to it that something was wrong. Then I started investigating. I discovered there was a job on. The job had not been shaped for me to lose. If I would not lay down then I was to be made lose any way they could bring it about. I was approached regarding this. I was never engaged in a fake fight in my fighting career. I will never be mixed up with any kind of an off-colored affair. I made that very plain to those people over there and packed my grip and returned to New York. And here I am."

Cincinnati, Feb. 11.—On behalf of Eddie Gardner, two sports last night challenged the winner of the Sullivan-McGovern contest at Louisville.

Oscar Gardner is after a match with Gus Bezenab, the Cincinnati feather bantam weight, who is now in Chicago. Oscar states that he will fight Bezenab at 116 pounds before any club offering a reasonable purse.

New York, Feb. 11.—Although the meeting between Jeffries and Fitzsimmons Saturday night did not result in the fighters agreeing to terms for a championship battle, it is the general opinion of the sporting fraternity that the match will be arranged. Both boxers want to fight, but each has his mind made up as to how the purse shall be divided. Fitz sticks to his demand that the money be split evenly. Jeffries, who originally wanted to fight on a winner-take-all basis, offered to split the purse 60 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser. That was as far as the champion would go in trying to meet the Cornishman's demands.

Jeffries says he is ready to fight Fitz, and that he thinks the public approves the terms he proposes.

OFFERS

OF HELP CAME FROM ALL DIRECTIONS

PATERSON POLITELY REFUSED
ALL OUTSIDE ASSISTANCE.

INSURANCE MEN IN THE DARK

City Suffers Heavily From Loss of Tax Records—Tangle Results—
Anarchists' Nest Burned.

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 12.—The night is a fire devastated city was a quiet one. Four or five times the smoldering ruins blazed out in spots but the firemen on the ground quickly suppressed the flames. Gangs of men were at work this morning cleaning up the debris, dynamiting and pulling down walls and doing all that can be done at this time in preparation for a speedy restoration of the burned district.

Telegrams are still pouring in from all sections of the country today offering aid. Mayor Finckelhoff replies with hearty thanks and with the information that Paterson will take care of her own sufferers.

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 11.—With courage unparalleled in the history of great disasters, Paterson has gone to work with splendid spirit to rebuild in the mile and a half stretch of ruin left by the fire. Offers of aid poured in from all directions, but not one of them was accepted.

The seriousness of the blow that has befallen the city is not yet appreciated by a fraction of the population. The money loss to buildings, fittings, homes and furnishings is still figured at from $2,000,000 to $10,000,000. Insurance companies have gone over the burned district but were as much at sea in regard to the actual losses as other people.

The heaviest loser will be the municipality. Aside from the losses in public buildings, amounting to $450,000, the astounding discovery was made that all the records of value of the tax department were destroyed. The arrears of taxes amount to between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. On some pieces of property no taxes have been paid since 1892. These arrears are being regarded as one of the best assets of the city and only recently a large bond issue was made on the strength of them. Not only this, but all the records of the department relative to the values of property, the assessments and the owners have been destroyed.

Representatives of 50 odd fire insurance companies visited Paterson yesterday. The losses to the individual companies will range from $10,000 up to $150,000. Twenty companies will lose $100,000 or more; 20 more between $50,000 and $75,000 and the remaining losses will be divided up among others. Some of the companies most heavily hit are the Continental which will lose $150,000; Liverpool, London and Globe, the North British, the Home, the Hanover, the Niagara, the Royal and the Hamburg-Bremen.

All of the banks and trust companies whose buildings were destroyed moved into temporary quarters and did what business they could. Their funds were in vaults buried deep in debris. These vaults were opened and their contents was found to be intact. In the vaults of the First National Bank about $2,000,000 in cash and securities were found.

The fact that the great silk mills escaped the ravages of the flames is most important. About half the population depends upon the silk trade. Another important industry is that of the locomotive building and it was equally fortunate that these works escaped the flame. The great Rogers works and the American Locomotive works give employment to thousands and these are running as usual.

The militia arrested in one haul 11 men caught looting a building.

RUNAWAY

Team Owned by the Standard Oil Company Took Fright Tuesday
On Fourth Street.

A team of horses attached to a big oil wagon, belonging to the Standard Oil company were standing in front of J. P. Lamb's grocery on North Fourth street about 11 o'clock this morning, when they became frightened at the noise made by the driver of a coal wagon letting down a drop seat, and ran away. They ran south on Fourth street, and when near the school house struck an electric road guy pole, breaking it off and causing it to fall across one of the horses' back, but fortunately it escaped with slight injury. The horses were caught before any further damage was done.

AGREEMENT

Reached by the Republican House Leaders on the Redistricting Bill
—The Seventeenth Unchanged.

A Scripps-McRae telegram from Columbus to the Advocate says:

A practical agreement has been reached by the Republican house leaders on the new redistricting bill. The bill makes 17 safe-republican districts; three democratic, the fourth, 13th, and 17th; and one doubtful, the fifth. This makes the third (Dayton) and the 12th (Columbus) districts Republican, and thus pleases both the Forakerites and the Daughertyites. Licking county is in the 17th district which comprises the counties of Licking, Coshocton, Wayne, Holmes and Tuscarawas.

MAD DOG

LED TWO POLICEMEN A MERRY
CHASE

Mayor Sent Geo. Mason to Jail for Abusing His Wife—First Arrest
In a Week.

There was another mad dog scare Monday afternoon on West Jefferson street, at which time a reddish brown cur, frothing at the mouth, snapping at any thing that came in its path, and showing other unmistakable signs of rabies, ran down the middle of the street.

Three different dogs ran out and were bitten by the brute, in one case tearing out an eye of the dog which attacked it.

Mr. Dille Brooke got close enough to strike the animal with his cane but the blow did not appear to have any effect, and the dog ran across the bridge into West Newark.

Officers Zerglebel and Rinehart made a search for the dog but were unable to find him.

George Mason was arrested by officers Horton and Jacobs for drunkenness and on complaint of his wife. Mason and his wife have not been living together for some time, and he is said to have gone to where she is staying, and broken down the door, which she had locked, when he abused her in various ways. The Mayor fined him $10 and costs and gave him 30 days in jail. Marshal Vogelmeier says that this is the first arrest that has been made for drunkenness since February 4th.

In the case of Mason, the Mayor remarked that it did not appear that he was as drunk as he was just mean.

COLUMBUS

Was at the Mercy of Highwaymen,
Who Operated Without Police Interference.

Columbus, O., Feb. 11.—Two highwaymen literally had Columbus at bay for a space of 15 minutes last night. They operated in the very heart of the city. These two men started from the corner of Spring and High streets, one of the principal down-town corners, and held up every man they met while walking over a few squares of Spring street.

They held up five men at the points of revolvers and then relieved their victims of watches, rings, pins and cash. As soon as they had robbed one man they proceeded on their way and held up the next. They were 15 minutes in making the five hold-ups, and during a part of that time they were within a few rods of a stream of people. The police have not caught the daring marauders.

The police today, after a desperate struggle, captured one of a pair of highwaymen, who held up seven business men last night. He was recognized by one of his victims.

FOUND DEAD

A PROMINENT MERCHANT AT ZANESVILLE DIES.

Without Warning Alex Johnson is Called to His Reward—Heart Disease Caused Death.

Zanesville, O., Feb. 11.—Alex Johnson one of Zanesville's best known merchants, was found dead in bed at 9:30 o'clock last night at his home. He was first discovered by his wife.

The deceased went to his room about 8 o'clock feeling better than he had for several days. He had been ill for the past week with a severe cold and last night at 6:30 o'clock he felt that he needed a physician. Dr. Davis was called, and upon an examination he found that Mr. Johnson was suffering from indigestion and a slight attack of grip. Remedies were administered by the physician and the patient seemed greatly benefited. He ate a hearty supper and was in much better spirits.

Before going to bed he said to his wife: "I have no pain now and I wish that I had sent for the doctor a week sooner." He thereupon went to bed and it is presumed that he never uttered another word. His death is attributed to heart disease. Mr. Johnson was 67 years of age. For more than half a century he had been identified with the business interests of the city.

HALF

SPRINGFIELD FIRE

BIG WHITELY SHOPS NOW A MASS OF RUINS

ONLY SURPASSED IN EXTENT

By the Krupp Gun Factory, But the Plant Was Occupied by Eight Different Concerns.

Springfield, O., Feb. 11.—As telegraphed to the Advocate yesterday, the great East street shops built at a cost of three quarters of a million dollars, were practically destroyed by fire Monday. The latest estimated loss is $500,000. The insurance is about $300,000. The fire was started by the explosion of some chemicals in the Champion chemical plant, situated in the southwest corner of the shops.

Among the heaviest losers are the Owen Machine Tool company, Champion Chemical company, Springfield Foundry company, Progress Stove & Furnace company, Indianapolis Frog & Switch company, Miller Gas Engine company, Green Manufacturing company, Krell French Piano company.

The Whitely shops were built in 1882 by William Whitely for the manufacture of harvesting machinery, at a cost of $750,000, and at that time the shops were the largest under one roof in the world, and they had only one rival in later years—the Krupp gun works in Germany. The equipment of the shops cost about $2,000,000, but after the failure of Whitely, a few years later, the shops were left idle for nearly 10 years, when they were sold at a receiver's sale, and Senator Fairbanks and several other capitalists bought them for $200,000.

The glasses were repaired and when the swelling had been reduced she put on the glasses, expecting to find no injury to the vision. To her surprise she found that she could no see at all. She remained in a darkened room for some time and when she ventured out again was delighted to find that all defects in her vision had been removed as a result of the accident.

THE TROUBLE AMONG AMERICA'S PROFESSED FRIENDS.

Americans are not much concerned about the disclosures and professions from European ministers as to their respective wishes in the matter of interference in the war between the United States and Spain. Still it is an interesting historical point. In the face of the denial by the British minister that Great Britain was opposed to any form of intervention the "Kreuz Zeitung," a leading German paper, says:

Diplomatic circles, however, entertained no illusions, and when England, April 14, through her ambassador, proposed a new collective note, in which the powers should declare that Europe regarded America's armed intervention in Cuba as unjustifiable, the other ambassadors telegraphed to their home governments asking for instructions.

The German foreign office has declared the "substantial accuracy" of this statement, which is irreconcilable with the British official declaration. Americans should allow Germany and England to fight out for themselves the issues of veracity, on this matter. We are getting the truth from their quarrel, and have ample evidence that all professions of friendship for us on the part of Great Britain at the outset of the Spanish war were purely hypocritical. Germany and Russia were just as much our friends as England was.

England is looking appealingly this way. She is short on beef. From this some idea can be gained as to the reason why European nations are anxious to be on friendly terms with us. It may not be our guns which make them this way, but no one can deny the pacific influence of the meat and bread which we have for sale and which the European nations must have.

At the same time we are trying to prick the Filipinos into a state of submissiveness with our bayonets we are trying to rob them of the benefits we are trying to rob them of the benefit of territorial incorporation into the United States by levying prohibitive duties on their products. As Governor Taft very reasonably suggests, it is folly to hinder pacification by denying to the people of the Philippines the advantage of free commercial intercourse. The common benefits resulting from reciprocal trade are the surest bonds of family.

The People Want Justice.
(Toledo Bee.)

There is no question as to the sentiment of the American people. They are in favor of being just to Cuba. The stubborn resistance of the Republican bosses on the ways and means committee is due to the fact that they are representing special protected interests and feel that they owe a great debt to the contributors of the Hanna corruption funds of 1896 and 1900 than they do to the American people. They are delaying action when time is an important consideration.

Tribute Paid to the Trusts.
(Wheeling Register.)

Taxes paid directly into the treasury are but a small portion of the total wrong from the people, the bulk of which goes into the treasuries of the trusts which charge the American consumer for all that he buys two or three prices, under cover of their tariff-created monopoly.

MR. BOWSER'S DIARY

HE PREPARES A QUEER MEMORANDUM OF DAY'S HAPPENINGS.

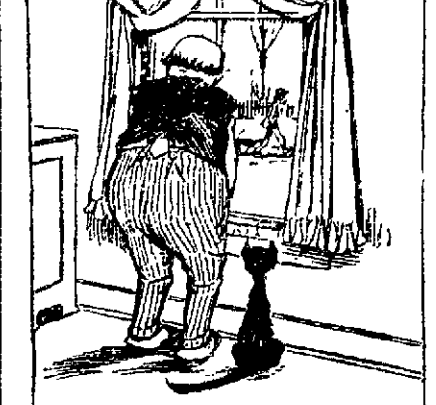

John Down Many Things as an Aid to Future Historians—Time and Place of Meeting Suspicious Characters Carefully Noted.

(Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.)

AFTER Mr. Bowser had smoked his chair and finished his newspaper the other evening he took a memorandum book from his pocket and began writing in it, and after awhile Mrs. Bowser remarked:

"You seem to have got a new idea. What is it you have been writing in that book for the last three nights?"

"Perhaps I can make you understand," he replied after the lapse of a moment.

"SAW A MAN PASSING ALONG, FOLLOWED BY THREE MINUTES."

"Can you remember what happened to you at 10 o'clock in the forenoon day before yesterday?"

"Nothing happened."

"That is, the house didn't catch fire or any one attempt to murder you, but nevertheless things may have happened to send a man to state prison or clear him of a grave charge. The gravest cases sometimes turn upon the merest trifles. The life of a man in St. Louis was saved the other day because a woman remembered seeing him in an alley at a certain hour."

"And so you are jotting down things to save human life?" she queried.

"It may be. At any rate, I have set out to jot down most of the happenings of each day, and no one can say what results may follow. History may be made of some of my memoranda."

"I think you are wasting time over it. If you have an hour to spare, you had better work at that ingrowing toe nail of yours."

"Heavens, woman, must you always lug sore heels, toe nails and porous plasters into a conversation?" shouted Mr. Bowser as a rich red color showed in his face.

"But you are complaining of your toe," she protested.

"That may be, but don't mangle toes."

MRS. BOWSER HURRIED DOWN TO FIND HIM SITTING UP IN A DAZE.

and brains. But for the diaries and memoranda books left behind by the people of the past where would our historians have secured their material?"

"And what have you jotted down thus far for the benefit of future history?"

"Nothing of much account, but I have been at work only three days. I think my jotting might help to unravel a few mysteries, however. I will read you what I have written:

"Wednesday.—Arose at the usual hour. Looked out of the window and saw a man passing along, followed by a dog. Man had a disreputable appearance and a furtive look. Usual breakfast. Left the house at the usual hour. Saw a man on the street car with blue goggles on. He seemed anxious to escape observation. Wonder if there is any connection between him and the man with the dog."

"I think there is," replied Mrs. Bowser. "I think the man with the dog watched outside while the goggles-eyed man sneaked in and drove the dagger to the poor baby's heart."

Mr. Bowser glared at her for a minute, and his hair could be heard curling, but with a powerful effort he held on to himself and continued:

"Thursday.—Arose as usual. Thermometer stood at 45 degrees above. Usual slip-slop breakfast. Had scarcely left the house when I encountered the furtive looking man again. He had disguised himself, but I knew him at once. His dog was not following him."

"The poor animal had probably got tired out," said Mrs. Bowser, who wanted to get even for the "slip-slop breakfast."

"Your case will be attended to later."

on, and I will now read the rest: Had scarcely taken the street car when I saw the man with the goggles. He was greatly perturbed, and it was evident that my presence upset him. I saw a walk pass between him and a man with a war on his chin. Goggles left the car by the front door while I was arguing with a man who had stepped on my toes, but I can give the police his description. Arrived home at the usual hour. Mrs. Bowser and the cat in the hall to welcome me."

"Is that all for Thursday?" asked Mrs. Bowser as he paused.

"Yes."

"Why didn't you tell me that you kicked the front door open when you arrived and that you told Mrs. Bowser you'd bring up in the parlorhouse because you found a broken clothespin at the gate?"

"By thunder, woman, you are going too far, too far," he shouted as he rose up. "If I sat down here to read a chapter from the Bible, you'd manage to turn it to ridicule. You seem to have less and less sense as time passes."

"I was just wondering what the future historian would find in your notes to make history out," she quietly replied.

"How can we tell that the man with the dog is not a red handed anarchist plotting against the life of the mayor? If so, my notes will convict him."

"I think he works in a liver," said down the street, and I have seen him and his dog a hundred times."

"But the man with the goggles? Suppose he is a seditionist?"

"Oh, the man with the goggles lived on the next block, and he got pepper in his eyes two weeks ago. Our own doctor attended him. I can't exactly understand how you saw him wink at another man. Did one of the goggles wink?"

"None of your business! If you take comfort in being an idiot, go ahead in it. I know the value of these notes and shall keep them up. For instance, when I came home this evening—"

"Well?" queried Mrs. Bowser as he waited.

"A suspicious looking person was hanging over Brown's gate. He was short and squat. He was run down at the heels. Suppose Brown is murdered in his bed tonight and the house robbed. My notes will furnish a clew to the police, and within twenty-four hours the murderer is arrested."

Mrs. Bowser was convinced that the suspicious person was a man who had been beating carpets for the Browns all the afternoon, but she didn't say so, and Mr. Bowser continued:

"Since we have been sitting here this evening I have heard and made notes of two fire alarms, one ambulance call, a cry of seeming distress and the howl of a dog. They may not prove of value, and yet they may bring a criminal to justice."

"And you won't fix your toe this evening?" she asked as he walked around.

Mr. Bowser halted to bestow a look of contempt upon her, and then started down stairs to have a look at the fur-ture in the cellar. He was thinking of future history as he descended and presently missed a step and turned head over heels, with a yell, and brought up on the cellar bottom. Mrs. Bowser hurried down to find him sitting up in a daze, and after she had felt of the bump on his head and ascertained that neither arm nor leg was broken she said:

"Friday Evening.—Have seen nothing of the man with the goggles or the man with the dog, but in descending my cellar stairs I engaged in a circus performance for the benefit of the future historian. Was assisted up stairs by my wife, the cook and the cat. No change in the system of government on my account. Come, Mr. Bowser."

He got up slowly and painfully and with many a sigh, and leaning against the wall, he pointed his finger at her and tried to express his feelings in utter language, but all he could get out was:

"Wo-woman, by th-thunder!"

His Valentine.

I scribbled and saved for weeks and weeks

And went without sleep and wine

To buy sweet May a Valentine—

Blue satin filled with funny jests,

Pink Cupids, roses, doves and times,

Two hearts beneath a marble bell

And verses full of tender things.

But, lo, I happened in to see

Another fellow that I knew

And saw tucked in his looking glass

The dainty square of white my Valentine

Oh, maiden dear, in love I see

You acted on a saving plan—

Received my loving Valentine

And sent it to the other man!

A PRICELESS LOVE

(Original.)

What pitfalls beset the young! All my life I have suffered from yielding to my youth to a simple natural inclination or, rather, yielding just enough to make my action a crime.

When I was eighteen, my mother took into her service a little maid from the country. She wore her dresses to the tops of her boots, her hair in a single braid down her back. It was very light, and her eyes were a pale blue. She was such a demure little thing and seemed so lonely clinging by herself in her room all the long evenings—for she did not appear to relish the society of the other servants—that I always spoke to her kindly when I wished her to do anything for me, usually softening my request with a smile. I gave her books to read, such books as I thought would interest a simple young girl. She always read them and returned them to me without any comment in words, but with such a look—I understood just what it meant.

One day she came into the library to do some dusting. I was seated in the great leather covered chair by the window reading. I was to leave for college the next day. She was going about with her feather duster, giving light touches here and there, but listlessly, as if absorbed by something else. Presently I said to her:

"You seem dispirited this morning, Janet. What is the matter?"

Perhaps she did not know what "dispirited" meant. At any rate, she did not reply, but turned to dust a bronze statuette, so that her back was toward me.

"Come, little girl, tell me if anything troubles you."

Still she gave me no answer. I got up from my chair and went to her to discover the cause of her silence by looking into her face. She must have heard me come up behind her, but she kept on with her work. I put a hand on each arm and turned her around. Her eyes were filled with tears.

"Poor child!" I said.

I bent and kissed her innocent young lips. Somehow I knew that her tears were for my departure on the morrow. Then it occurred to me that there was something in all this that could only lead to trouble, and, releasing her, without a word I left the library.

When I returned a year later, I found Janet a little taller, her dresses lengthened to the floor, her hair in a knot at the back of her head. The year had brought experience to me, and I knew better than before that I had trespassed on forbidden ground. I greeted her kindly, but made it plain by my tone and manner that there was a social gulf between us, watching her to see if the change affected her. I could not see that it did, and felt a sense of relief.

I continued to return at vacation time, once a year, noting Janet's growth from the child she had come to us to a willowy woman of nineteen. While she grew tall, she did not grow robust. Her cheeks were pale, and her step was languid. On my return after being graduated I noticed this especially and spoke to my mother about it, but received no satisfaction as to the cause.

I went abroad to finish my studies, and while I was away my mother died. I wrote directions to close the household, leaving everything as it was till I came. It was not for two years more that I went back to the old place with a view to putting it in the market for sale. My mother had had an elderly woman in her service who was with her when she died, and to her I went to gain what satisfaction I could in talking to her about the last days they had passed together. I asked her to go with me to the little cemetery near by and show me the grave. She did so, and I was much pleased with the care that had been given to my mother's resting place.

"What is that mound up in the corner?" I asked.

"That is Janet's grave."

"Janet's?"

"Yes. She died soon after your mother. When the house was closed, I took her with me. She had been long failing and lived only a short time, though long enough to do all this work, of which you see the result. 'We must make haste,' she would say. 'He may come home at any time, and think how he would feel to find his dear mother's grave neglected.'"

"Janet dead?"

"She would come here every morning, weeding and spading when she was so weak that I could not see how she was able even to walk here. One day when she did not return at the accustomed time I came and saw her sitting on that bench. I spoke to her, and she did not answer. She was dead."

I was looking at the little mound devoid of ornament. This girl had spent two years of labor, her life slowly going out the while, that when I returned I might not find my mother's grave neglected. During this period I had never thought once of one so devoted.

"Of what disease did she die?" I asked after some time.

"I discovered that accidentally. She guarded her secret carefully and I am sure would not give me permission to tell you. But I would like you to know. Janet died of a hopeless love for you."

I stood without motion for a long time. I was far away in the library where I had kissed her.

For many years I have visited those two graves every summer. In vain have I resolved to marry and build a home. None of the women in my social circle has ever given me that pure affection which I received from Janet, whose whole soul was mine. Though I am now an old man, I am a bachelor.

The Pawned Ring

Yes; I suppose I shall have to let it go. And how carefully I have treasured it!

Three years ago! What a lot has happened in those three years! Then I was just a young girl. Now I feel an old woman. I was full of illusions then, only I didn't call them illusions.

But there, what is the good of thinking? It is getting late, and Florence must be back before Jack comes home or he'll be suspicious. Here it is, Florence. Be very careful.

I feel horrid parting with it. It seems somehow like giving away part of oneself; but, then, what else was I to do?

I can't ask Jack for any more money. When I asked him to pay Violet's bill, he made quite a scene about it and said I was horribly extravagant, and things had been so bad lately, and he really didn't know whether we oughtn't to move into a cheaper house.

I really believe Jack cares hardly a bit for me now. He's always out at the club or kept late at the office or something—especially something, I fancy. I believe we hardly spend one evening together in a week, and to think I might have married Arthur! Oh, what a fool I have been!

How well I remember the afternoon when Arthur brought me the ring. He said the stones in it were not half so bright as my eyes. Why doesn't Jack ever talk to me like that?

Arthur was always different. There was a caress in his voice, and the mere touch of his hand was a declaration of love, and I might have married him, I might!

I wonder what Arthur is doing now? I've never seen him since. He said he was going to travel abroad. Perhaps he is dead. He never was very strong—not a bit like Jack. Jack's a regular horse.

If there was anything else I could have sold, I would never have let Arthur's ring go.

But there, I have nothing else so valuable. I remember how he told me that there were half a dozen people after the ring and how he only just managed to get it by outbidding them.

It was frightfully extravagant of him; but, then, he loved me—ah, how he must have loved me!

Jack would never dream of buying me a ring like that, and he's a great deal better off, whatever he chooses to say now, than poor Arthur ever was.

It's lucky Jack has never seen it. He would be sure to have asked nasty questions about it, and I'm sure I don't know what I should have said. He nearly did see it that evening, too, when he came in suddenly when I was slipping it on my finger and watching the diamonds glitter in the firelight.

How fortunate it was that I had just got into my new frock for dinner, and how I trembled when Jack insisted on pinning in the roses at my breast! I thought his clumsy fingers would be sure to tumble across its hiding place, and indeed once he actually touched it, but he never guessed what it was. He wondered why it was that I rushed up stairs for my handkerchief the moment we had sat down to dinner instead of sending Florence. But the minute I had to myself in my room was quite sufficient to dive down into my dress for the ring and lock it up in its usual place.

Ten o'clock! What a time Florence is taking! Surely the shops aren't all shut. I thought those dreadful pawnbroker people were always open. I've always heard so. I wonder what I shall get for the ring.

Two hundred at least, though of course it's worth a great deal more than that.

I know what I will do—I'll pay the bill—that's let me see, $150—and then buy myself another ring with what is left. That will be still like having Arthur's ring in a way, and I shan't feel quite so dreadful.

Ah, there is Florence at last! What a long time you have been! Give me the money. Give two dollars, you say, for a ring like that?

Ec, paste? My—or—en you may go, Florence. Got? Don't you hear?

Think of it! That I should have been so deceived! It's monstrous! Little beast Arthur!

I don't believe he ever cared for me at all! Paste, and all the lies he told me about it too! It's disgraceful, scandalous!

And I loved him! And, no, never! And yet—no, I am sure I didn't! Horrid little beast!

Horrid—or—bother this pocket. Where is my handkerchief? After all, what's the good of being a woman if one cannot have a cry sometimes?

What's—what's—(sink back into a chair and sob passionately).

Why, it's past 12. Jack said he would be home at 12. I must not let him see I've been crying, and, yes, there's a key in the door now. It is Jack. I wonder if he will come up stairs or go into the smoking room. I know I told him never to dare to come up stairs at this time, but I really didn't mean it.

Listen—yes, he is coming up stairs, the dear old fellow. Oh, I'm glad!

Oh (runs to the door and throws her self into her husband's arms), come and kiss me, Jack!

Again he sought a bride with a large dowry and again became a widower. Then he thought he would return to his long neglected profession. He approached an old friend, who had meanwhile become a judge of the supreme court, and asked what, in his opinion, would be the wisest course for him to pursue. "Stick to the probate and matrimonial," said the judge.—Law Notes.

UNION LABOR

GAINS STEADY AS SHOWN BY ANNUAL REPORTOf New York Bureau—With Increase of Membership—Has Been Rise in Wages.

Advance sheets from the nineteenth annual report of the bureau of labor statistics of the State of New York, John McMackin, commissioner, devoted to the membership, hours of labor, wages and other working conditions of unions in the Empire State, shows that the membership and wages in the different unions are constantly increasing. The statistics embodied in the report shows that the cause of labor organizations is established on a high plane and that the old prejudice which once existed against such organizations is fast dying out and people have come to recognize that they are necessary to prevent the toiling masses from being reduced to a condition of servitude.

Statistics adduced show that 30 per cent of the cases of poverty are brought about by the lack of work or low wages, so that low wages are almost as much to be feared as no work at all—both meaning poverty and misery.

The report shows that the conditions of employment in New York were unusually good for the year 1901, with the statistics restricted to the organized wage workers of the state. They do not therefore cover all, or even a majority of the wage earners, but they do represent a minority that is large in points of numbers (275,000 working people) and representative of nearly all the manufacturing and mechanical industries. Organized labor includes, in the first instance, the more highly skilled workmen, and in the second instance, the wage earners in cities rather than in villages; hence, for both reasons and aside from the probability that members of labor organizations secure more regular rates of wages than nonunionists following the average earnings of all workmen. It would therefore be incorrect to quote the conditions of organized labor as actually representative of all wage earners, but on the other hand the fluctuations from year to year in the amount of employment and earnings of trade unionists do reflect actual changes throughout the entire body of workmen.

The New York bureau has five years collected reports from trade unions designed to show the economic conditions of their members, and as these returns are based on uniform methods, they permit comparison for this entire period. The development of labor unions in the Empire State in that period is interesting. In 1891 the number of labor unions that reported was 869; in 1901 it had increased to 1881 which is a gain of 119 per cent. In the same period the membership had increased from 157,197 to 276,141 or by 76 per cent. In the year ending Sept. 30, 1899, the increase in membership was 38,000; in 1900, 36,000; in 1901, 31,000.

The garment-making industry made large gains in the number of organized working women, as did also the tobacco trades. In 1897 only 2.4 per cent of the members of labor organizations of this state were women, but in 1901 the proportion had risen to 5.3 per cent.

ings having gone to the men of the theatrical and musical trades, printing, building trades, and public employment. The smallest earnings of men are found in the clothing and textile and tobacco trades, and these are also the trades in which the competition of women is strongest. The earnings of the women are of course very much smaller, the largest class containing those who earned from $75 to $100, which is just half the amount earned by the largest body of men.

A good index of the conditions of labor is furnished by statistics of the unemployed, which are reported four times a year by the secretaries of labor organizations. These reports show the number of members idle on the last working day of each quarter and also the number idle throughout the entire quarter, thus covering both occasional idleness, which may be due to nothing but inclement weather, and continuous idleness, which indicates either serious incapacity for work or inability to find employment.

The report concludes with a discussion of wage rates, in which attention is called to the fact that large incomes have depended partly upon more constant employment. Deductions made showing that as employment increased only 8 per cent and earnings increased 16 per cent it is apparent that wages have also advanced. Save for the decrease in 1901 there was a steady and constant gain.

ROOF FELL

ALMOST BURYING TWO ENGINES
AT ROUND HOUSEFortunately Nobody Was Hurt—A Peculiar Accident Occurred Here
Tuesday Morning.

A peculiar accident, and one which might have been very serious in its results, occurred at the Baltimore and Ohio round house about nine o'clock this morning. Mike McDonough, one of the hostlers, was taking an engine into the round house, and just as he was about to go through the big doors leading to the turn table, one of the doors was blown shut and caught the running board of the engine just ahead of the air pump. The result was that the brick work between the doors was torn loose, and the roof of the round house, covering two stalls, came down with a crash, almost burying the engines beneath the debris. At first it was thought that several of the workmen had been caught and were buried beneath the ruins, but an examination soon developed the fact that no one had been injured, and that neither one of the engines had been badly damaged.

RAILWAY AFFAIRS.

NEWS OF BOTH GENERAL AND
LOCAL INTEREST.B. & O. Trouble to be Settled—One Road Says No Tobacco—Altoona's Pay Day—Personal.

NO TOBACCO ALLOWED.

The St. Louis and San Francisco railroad company has issued an order forbidding the use of tobacco by passenger trainmen in uniform on duty and by employees in general around railway stations.

The anti-tobacco rule originated in the office of B. L. Winchell, general manager of the road. Its object the officials of the system say, is to keep the station cleaner and add to the comfort of the passengers. The rule went into effect February 5 and the management expects it to become a permanent rule. As with other rules of the company, dismissal is the penalty for repeated violations.

Trainmen, ticket agents, baggage-men and all employed on passenger trains or in or about railway stations must comply with the mandate and, while primarily aimed at cigarettes, pipes and cigars, the order embraces chewing tobacco as well.

TO BE SETTLED.

The trouble between the officials and employees of the Baltimore & Ohio will be amicably settled says the Columbus Dispatch. For some time persistent rumors have been in circulation to the effect that a general strike of the men on the Baltimore & Ohio system was imminent on account of a disagreement between the new management and the different railroad orders. It has been said that in the adjustment of affairs under the new regime the officials would not deal with the men upon the basis of old agreements, claiming that the road was now under the control of a different company.

But the indications do not bear out these reports. The different committees representing the four railroad brotherhoods of the Baltimore & Ohio system were in Baltimore the first of this week in conference with General Manager G. L. Potter, and they have returned with no expression of fear that matters will not be amicably settled at their next meeting with this official. They went to confer with him regarding a scale of wages for the current year. There are also a number of minor concessions the various brotherhoods will ask, looking to a more equitable distribution of runs and division of work. In turn the men declare they are willing to concede something to the company adjusting the road's affairs to a new system of operation.

At the meeting from which the committees have just returned General Manager Potter arranged to meet the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen again on February 18, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers February 25 and the order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen on March 4. Committees of each one of these orders from all of the divisions of the system will meet in the same conference. In view of the fact that these committees have been on to Baltimore several times, and while there arranged, separate dates for another meeting when it is proposed to make an adjustment of affairs, does not appear that any trouble is imminent.

ALTOONA'S PAY DAY.

Yesterday was the banner pay day in the history of the Pennsylvania shops in Altoona. Its employees received $530,000 in payment for work done in January. Every department in the local shops is taxed to its utmost getting out new and repair work and men have been working considerable overtime.

MR. WIDMAN'S CONDITION.

Baltimore and Ohio Engineer Harry Wildman, who figured in the wreck Kirk of the Newark and Granville Electric road, has resigned his position. He is reported to have had two ribs broken. Brakeman Dan Harrington, who was on the front end of the string of the cars saved himself by jumping, while Dan Smith, the rear brakeman, who remained on the cars, escaped injuries save a few bruises. Workmen were engaged Monday afternoon in shoveling the coal out of the store room which had been thrown in through the window.

An unofficial rumor has reached the shops that the water stations along the road are to pass out of the control of the maintenance of way department into the mechanical department. Such a change would likely mean that the water stations shop at present in this city in charge of Foreman Wells would be transferred to Newark.—Zanesville Signal.

After having been off duty for some days, Brakeman T. S. Harrington has been marked up for work.

Relatives and Friends—Died in New York Hotel.

A special to the Advocate from Marietta, O., today announces the sudden death of Mr. Guy F. Doan, who has relatives in Newark.

Word was received in Marietta yesterday that Mr. Doan had been found dead in the New York Central Hotel on February 8th. He was en route to Providence, R. I., to enter into a partnership with his cousin, Elmer Doan, of that city. Mr. Doan was known to have had $1800 with him when he left Marietta. It is said that his death was due to heart disease.

Mr. Doan had a host of friends in Newark and was highly respected. He was the only son of his parents. The remains will reach Marietta Wednesday and the funeral services will be held at the First Congregational church at 10 o'clock that day, burial being made in Oak Grove cemetery.

During his incumbency Judge Jones has made for himself a record of which he may justly feel proud, as a capable, impartial and just arbiter. His extensive and intimate knowledge of the law, his careful research of the authorities upon all questions arising for his decision, his dispatch of the business in trial cases, and above all his conscientious rectitude, and fearless adherence to those principles which he considered just, has marked him as one of the most learned jurists and successful judges that has occupied the bench from this county.

In retiring, Judge Jones may feel assured that he has merited and will carry with him the esteem, confidence and respect of every member of the bar of this and the other counties in this judicial district.

The Sergeant's Story

(Original.)

The 1st United States Infantry was in garrison. It was midnight. The relief had just come in to the guardhouse

tired and irritable, especially one man, a recruit who had not yet got used to guard duty.

"If I ever get a chance," he said, "I'll pay off that little poppin'jay. To think of me, a grown man, bel'n' under orders from a snip like that!"

"Who are you talkin' about?" asked the sergeant of the guard, with four service stripes on his sleeve.

"Lieutenant Bumble."

"See here, man, if you want to shoot words at Lieutenant Bumble you'd better fire in hearin' of some one else

besides Sergeant Conover. P'raps I haven't been face to face with death

in company with Lieutenant Bumble, and p'raps it wasn't his pluck that kep' me up when I was ready to drop with fear of cold murder."

"Give us that, Conover," said a voice from a farther corner of the guard-room.

"It's this," said the sergeant. "We was pushin' the Spaniards in towards

Santiago and spreadin' ourselves out to git round 'em. Our regiment was movin' to the right, and our company was ordered to the front. The captain sent Lieutenant Bumble—just reported from West Point and more of a baby faced chap than he is now—ahead to report on the topography of the country, and keep a sharp lookout for the

—th, which was comin' from the opposite direction to join us. I was with him and eight men, besides a telegraph operator with his machine.

"Well, we'd got five or six miles from the regiment and was steppin' into a pocket between two hills covered with timber when of a sudden we heard voices behind, beside and before us

callin' in the dirty Spanish lingo to surrender. Since there was hundreds of

'em and only ten of us we satisfied

'em. An officer stepped up to the lieutenant and jabbered Spanish at him for awhile. Then another officer come up and said in broken English:

"What's your name?"

"Bumble."

"Rank?"

"Lieutenant."

"The citizen?"

"By this time the lieutenant had seen the Spaniards cryin' the telegraph machine under the arm of the 'cit' and suspected some sneakin' business.

"An engineer," he said, lyin' like a man.

"No, he isn't. He's a telegraph operator. Now, Lieutenant Bumble, send a message to your colonel that the way is clear and to come right on."

"I can't do that," said the lieutenant.

"Very well. You and your men can stand up there in line while we put a volley into you."

"The lieutenant didn't weaken a bit,

but some of the men did, and the telegraph operator said, 'I'll send the message.'"

"That'll do," said the Spaniard.

"The operator connected with the wires, the lieutenant abused him for a coward, and jest as all was ready the

'cit' began to dry like a woman, and turnin' round, he wrung his hands,

havin':

"I can't do it, and I won't!"

"That's the stuff for you," said

Bumble, smilin'. "I knowed you could not do it."

"Get into line, you pigs!" said the Spaniard, ragin', and givin' one after the other a shove, he made us stand touchin' elbows. Then, callin' with his jabberin' tongue, a platoon come out of the woods, we standin' with our backs to 'em.

"Will you do it?" said the Spaniard

RECORDS

DON'T SHOW DEATH OF THOMAS

BABY

Young Chicago Man Surprised to Learn Mrs. Ada Blandy Thomas

Had Child in Columbus.

Augusta Eleanor Thomas, the little girl living at 1219 East Long street,

Columbus, with Mrs. Ada Blandy

Thomas, formerly of Newark, may be the turning point in the Thomas di-vorice case.

A special from Chicago states that

Dr. E. F. McFatrian, who is looking after young Thomas' interests, claims that the baby now living with Mrs.

Thomas is not the child of Harold E.

Thomas. He said that if young Thomas is the father he never knew it. He claims that the child born to Mrs.

Thomas died from diphtheria, and they supposed that would end the controversy. Young Thomas was surprised when his wife claimed he was the father of the child.

If the child born to Mrs. Thomas died in Columbus, the records there fail to disclose it. A search of the books in the city health office does not show the death of Augusta Eleonora Thomas, nor is there any record of such a burial in Green Lawn cemetery.

Mrs. Thomas claims she has abundant proof that the child born to her on August 1, 1898, is the one now living with her. Her attorneys say young Thomas' story is absurd, for they say they have evidence in which he admits the child was his.

The case will be at issue in Chicago soon and then it is expected that the secrets of the family will be exposed to the world.

A Newark friend of Mrs. Ada Blandy

Thomas tells the Advocate that he knows that young Thomas visited his wife in Columbus some time ago, and that at that time there seemed to be no doubt in the young man's mind that the baby in the house was his own.

WEDDING

Of Miss Viola Hannon and Mr. Martin

Manion at St. Francis de Sales

Church.

One of the prettiest weddings in Newark for a long time took place at

St. Francis de Sales church this morning, when Miss Viola Hannon and Mr.

Martin Manion were united in marriage. The ceremony took place at five o'clock and was performed by the Rev. Father O'Boylan, in the presence of a large number of the friends of the contracting parties, the beautiful wedding ritual of the church being used. Father O'Boylan celebrated nuptial mass for the happy couple.

Mr. Leo Manion, of Bellaire, brother of the groom, acted as groomsmen, and Miss Margaret McWilliams, one of the intimate friends of the bride,

Mrs. Annie McKay, Chaplain Sons of Temperance, 326 Spadina Ave., Toronto, Cured of Severe Female Troubles by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Being a mother of five children I have had experience with the general troubles of my sex. I was lacerated when one of my children was born and from that hour I date all my afflictions. I found that within a few months my health was impaired, I had female weakness and serious inflammation and frequent flooding. I became weak and dizzy but kept on my feet, dragging through my work without life or pleasure. A neighbor who had been helped by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound insisted that I take at least one bottle. I did so and felt so much better that I kept on the treatment. For seven months I used the Compound faithfully and gladly do I say it, health and strength are mine once more. I know how to value it now when it was so nearly lost, and I appreciate how great a debt I owe you. The few dollars I spent for the medicine cannot begin to pay what it was worth to me. Yours very truly, Mrs. ANNA MCKAY, Chaplain Sons of Temperance."

$5000 REFUND IF THE ABOVE LETTER IS NOT GENUINE.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. Refuse all substitutes. Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

ZEB WHITE TREED.

TELLS OF AN OCCASION WHEN BROUN ACTED AS RETRIBUTIVE AGENT.

The Old Possum Hunter Goes Hunting on Sunday Instead of to Camp Meeting With His Good Wife and Is Punished by a Bear.

(Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.)

"I heard they was going to hev a camp meetin' over at Snicker's grove," said old Zeb White, the possum hunter, "but I hadn't paid much heed to it, when one Sunday mornin' my old woman says to me:

"Zeb, we'll take a walk over to that camp meetin' as soon as I get the dishes washed up, and we won't come back till night."

"It's fo' miles over that," says I.

"Yes, I know."

"And it's a hot day."

"Yes."

"And hard walkin'."

"Yes."

"And it would be time throwed away."

"But we's gwine right along jest the same," she says. "We's gwine to take front seats when we git that, and we's gwine to mix in with other folks and let the Lawd know that we've got souls in our bosoms. Better be gittin' ready."

"It was jest the season to watch wild bees and line 'em to a tree," explained Zeb, "and I'd figgered on puttin' in the day at that. I told the old woman so and asked her to go on alone, and she turned on me with:

"Zeb White, if yo' reckon to cheat the Lawd and come out all right yo'll git left. Nobody ever did it in all this world. If yo' steal his day, sunthin will shorly happen to yo'."

"But we want honey in the fall, don't we?" says I.

"What's the good of honey if yo' lose yo' soul?"

"Nobody's gwine to lose his soul on account of huntin' up a bee tree."

"Mebbe not. Mebbe he'll jest break his neck or a leg or wildcats will claw him or h'ars roll him about. The Bible tells about the fate of the stiff-necked and obstinate, but yo' won't heed it. Jest go right along arter yo' wild honey, Zeb White, and I'll go to camp meetin' by myself. I reckon yo'll find out the power of Providence before sundown."

"She went away without another word to me, and for half an hour I was a good mind to follow on. I didn't feel right about it 'tall, and my old dawg slunk away from me as if he was ashamed of his master. I didn't want to give in, however, and bimeby I shot the doah and strolled off to look fur bees. I was makin' fur a place about two miles away, but befo' I reached it I stopped to look at a big chestnut tree with a holler in it. That holler was big 'nuff fur fo' men to stand in, and I was lookin' in and wonderin' why I had never seen the tree befo' when I heard sunthin movin' behind me. I wheeled about, and there was a whoppin' big b'ar sneakin' up on me. I could tell by the looks of his eye that he meant business, and it was no use to try to bluff him. One jump

carried me into the holler, and he rushed and jest missed me. I had no gun, but I did hev my knife along, and when the b'ar tried to follow me into the tree I slashed him fo' or five times. He was no fool. He seen I had the advantage, and he jest backed off and sot down to wait. I kept purty quiet fur an hour, thinkin' he'd git discouraged and go away, but he had other plans on hand. When I stuck my head out and waved my arms and yelled at him, he growled a few times, but we didn't cum a foot nigher.

"At fust I looked upon him jest as a common b'ar, but bimeby I begun to wonder if he hadn't bin sent to punish me fur dodgin' the camp meetin' and breakin' the Sabbath. The idea kinder scared me, but made me mad as well, and two hours had gone by befo' I made up my mind to anything. Then I thought to crawl out and make a fight for it, but that varmint was on to me like a streak of lightning. He jest missed my head with a blow of his paw, and I was satisfied that he had me boxed up. It was 10 o'clock in the mornin' when I jumped into that holler, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon I was hungry and thirsty and feelin' mighty serious about things. At that hour a sheep and a calf cum wanderin' along together and clus behind 'em a hawk; but, though the b'ar licked his chops and looked arter them, he didn't move away.

"It was plain that I was in a bad way," continued the old hunter, "but I didn't see what I could do about it. I was in the holler, and the b'ar was outside, and there was no show fur me to cum out till he went away. It cum sundown, and it cum night, and he was still there. I saw I was in fur all night, and I went to sleep. I woke up once and saw his eyes shinin', but he let me alone. I was awake soon arter daylight, and he was right there. Not to worry yo' with particulars, I passed two nights and two days and a half in that holler tree, and at last I'd hev given my left arm fur a drink of spring water, to say nothin' about my hunger. I was no longer a match fur the b'ar. I was weak and flighty, and he'd hev a big advantage over me. However, I was tryin' to work up my courage to crawl out and do the best I could and hev it over with when Abe Holden, who was lookin' fur the lost newel, cum that way, and the varmint made a sneek. My voice wasn't much stronger than a baby's, but I managed to make Abe hear, and he pulled me out and helped me home. The old woman sot on the doorstep singin' a hymn, and as we cum up she looks at Abe and says:

"Good evenin', Mr. Holden. Kin I take it that yo' old woman is peart?"

"Fairly peart—fairly peart. Mrs. White," he replied.

"And yo' 'pear to hev nostringer with yo'?" she goes on.

"No, ma'am. It's Zeb, yo' old man."

"Indeed? The last I saw of my old man he was gwine out to find a bee tree. Did he find it?"

"He found a holler tree, ma'am."

"Yes?"

"And a b'ar."

"Yes?"

"And the b'ar has lost him in that tree since Sunday mornin'."

"Shoot Mr. Holden, what a mind askin' Zeb what he thinks about camp meetin'?"

"He dun dotes on her, ma'am—dun dotes."

"And has he got a soul?"

"He has. Yes, he's got a soul as big as a boss blanket."

"And what does he think about cheatin' the Lawd outter his Sunday?"

"He'll never do it ag'in, ma'am, and as I'm in a right smart hurry yo'll excuse me if I pass on."

"He passed on," said Zeb, with a sorrowful smile, "and the old woman made me some chicken broth and tucked me into bed."

Stops Pain

Omega Oil

Pains are very much alike. As the old saying goes, "Six of one are half a dozen of the other." The principal difference between pains is the names given by doctors. The name doesn't amount to anything. If the pain is in the back the doctors call it one thing, and if it is in the leg they call it another, and yet if they should change those names the pain would hurt just as bad. Omega Oil stops pain. The trouble may be in the neck, shoulders, back, arms, elbows, wrists, hips, legs, knees, ankles or feet. No matter. Omega Oil puts out pain in all parts of the body just as water puts out fire in all parts of a house. It has been tried so often that there is no longer any doubt about it. Hundreds of thousands of bottles have been used and given satisfaction everywhere. Omega Oil stops pain, and don't forget it.

Omega Oil is good for everything a human ought to be good for.

No more use for the old smoke house. It has served its day. Let it burn.

Smoke your meat the new way with

KRAUSERS' LIQUID EXTRACT OF SMOKE
A 75c. bottle will smoke an ordinary size butchering.

Smoking meats without fire has proved such a decided success that even those who were disposed a few years ago to make light of the idea are now using Krausers' Liquid Extract of Smoke. The liquid extract does away with the risks and inconvenience attending the old smoke-house process. It is a perfect state of preservation and is not infected with insects. The extract is made by distilling the smoke from hickory and maple wood and it is absolutely harmless. The makers, E. Krauser & Bro., of Milton, Pa., will send true to anyone interesting printed matter about methods of curing and smoking all kinds of meats.

LEFT IN A HURRY

MRS. E. W. SWISHER ROTS OUT A BURGLAR.

Exciting Incident on East Gay Street in Columbus—Key Winker's Fruitless Visit.

(Columbus Dispatch)

There was a daring attempt to burglarize the residence of E. W. Swisher of 281 East Gay street, which was frustrated Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Swisher were out sleigh riding and returned about that hour. Mrs. Swisher entered the house from side entrance and was much surprised to have an inner door slammed in her face and locked.

She thought at first it was her father trying to frighten her, but after waiting some time she became alarmed and notified her husband, who had driven to the barn. Mrs. Swisher then returned and tried the door again to be sure that it had been locked. Mr. Swisher went to the front door and entered the house. No one could be found by a number of officers who came in a patrol wagon in response to a telephone call.

A number of articles were found disturbed but nothing was missing as far as could be ascertained. A well-filled pocketbook belonging to Mrs. Swisher was lying in full view in an upstairs room, but was unharmed. It was thought the thieves left by the front door, as Mrs. Swisher waited at the side door, for neighbors surrounded the house while the police made a search.

Entrance was effected by means of a key, as far as can be told.

The funeral will take place from St. Francis de Sales church Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.
